SECRETS OF COMFORT.

Though sometimes small evils, like invisible insects, inflict pain and a single hair may stop a vast machine, yet the chief secret of comfort lies in not suffering trifles to vex one and in prudently cultivating an undergrowth of small pleasures, since very few great ones, alas, are let on long leashes.

EWING DESCRIBES ORIGIN AND GROWTH OF THE MOSAIC LAW

Gave Rise to Two Distinct Divisions, One Emphasizing Form and Ritual, the Other Spirit and Reverence.

Describing the origin and growth of the mosaic law in his Sunday morning sermon at the Congregational church, the Reverend C. E. Ewing brought out that the development of the law as laid down in its beginning, which gave rise to two distinct schools, the priestly, emphasizing ritual and form, and the prophetic, with the spiritual and reverential side predominating. Christ, confounding the two schools, and the two divisions, and taught toward the spiritualist. The church today finds the same two schools, one concerned largely with form, the other more intent on teaching and interpretation.

Leviticus, 11: 44: "Be ye holy as I am holy," was the text. It indicated, said the Reverend Ewing, that Jehovah was the law-giver, and that the law followed. As the chosen people of God their conduct should be governed by His precepts.

"Although Moses did not complete the law, he was the first real law-maker. He gave the children of Israel the beginnings of their law as it is found written in Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. The first table of the law was written on tablets of stone, we are told in the book of Exodus. But when Moses came down from the mountain and found the people worshipping the golden calf, he broke the tablets, and the second table of the law was written by Moses at God's dictation.

"The original law given to the children of Israel by Moses consisted of the law of commandments and certain basic law principles of purity, honesty and righteousness. There were also some civil laws, governing the ideas of justice as between one man and his neighbor. As regards to property, but as the Israelites continued their journey through the wilderness in search of the Promised Land, certain amendments arose resulting in a judicial settlement. The appeal was to Moses who, after an appeal to God, would direct the course to be taken. This resulted in setting a precedent which became a part of the Mosaic law.

"In addition to the code of criminal and civil law there also grew up the ritual law which also had its beginning with Moses, but which was developed more and more as time went on. We find these laws written in Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy, some in Exodus, and is not probable that these laws were written several centuries after Moses' death, but the beginning of the ritualistic service of the tabernacle was prescribed by Moses. He also set aside the men of the tribe of Levi for priestly service, exempting them from all other duties. The distinction between the Levites and the Aaronites, who became priests, developed later. It resulted in the elevation of the priestly class which placed emphasis on form and ritual, and a class of people, especially the Pharisees, who devoted themselves especially to ritual law, and the rabbis were persons particularly informed on ritualistic law.

"The result was the conflict between the priestly and the prophetic. Christ favored the prophetic side, emphasizing the spiritual, and we today get our inspiration from the prophets, and not from the Levites of Sinai, but from the Lord Christ."

BIG DELEGATION AT TEACHERS' SESSION

Eighty Teachers in Rural Schools of County Were Present at Training School Conference.

Eighty rural school teachers of the county attended the conference on Saturday at the Teachers' Training School, conducted under the auspices of the county superintendent and the training school faculty. An important feature of the program was the inspection of the model school in the new building, which was in session both morning and afternoon for the benefit of the teachers attending the gathering. Miss Bertha C. Sayles of the Whitewater normal school was the principal speaker at the morning session on the subject, "The Business Side of a Teacher's Life," and Miss Bessie Buer of the teachers' training course at the Jefferson Wisconsin school spoke in the afternoon on the "State Course of Study for Rural Schools." The conference was one of the best attended that has ever been conducted at the training school. About forty of the teachers were served with luncheon at the training school, the luncheon being prepared by the students of the domestic science class.

STEALTHY PROMOTER ELUDES HIS GUARD

Man Wanted for Marketing of Fictitious Stocks Escapes Edgerton Authorities.

In the quickly changing life of W. L. Lawrence, wanted at this time by the authorities at Janesville, Wis., for alleged fraudulent marketing of worthless stocks, there was added another episode yesterday, when by his own Wallingfordian cleverness he eluded his guard and escaped the meshes of the law which were fast entangling him. It is alleged that this financier undertook the floating of a proposition to build a cemetery vault, but after marketing a considerable number of shares among the unsuspecting populace of a community, he left town with the material rewards of his enterprise but with no advantage as to the construction of the mausoleum.

This, it is alleged, was his customary method of separating the credulous from their hard-earned money. Yesterday, however, Sheriff Whipple received a telegram from the sheriff of Urbana, Ill., asking him to guard or arrest Lawrence in Edgerton pending his arrival. This was the first time that Lawrence had been sought by a sheriff in Edgerton. Accordingly a strict surveillance in the form of a husky guard was placed over the accused.

Peace prevailed. The authorities resigned himself to his fate. Sheriff Adams of Urbana hurried to the scene. But the quiet of the town was broken by the presence of Lawrence's son and a man named Porter, being free from the severe restrictions which were placed upon him, he had to the discovery and obtaining of a single cutter and a horse. In some manner during supper last evening the horse and cutter disappeared, with the result that the countryside was scoured by officials of both this county and of Illinois for some clue as to the whereabouts of the swindler.

Agricultural and Garden Dept.

(By Allen B. West.)

Question: I have a flock of twenty-five hens, half of them pullets and the rest two years old next spring. I am only getting one or two eggs a day, sometimes not any. How can I get them to lay.

Answer: There are several essentials which must be provided in order to secure winter eggs.

First, Proper care of the fowls during growth. As nothing can be done about that now we will not stop to discuss that, except to suggest that for eggs next winter you should plan to have your chickens hatch in April if you have the heavier fowls, such as Plymouth Rocks, Orpingtons, etc. A month or more before the hatching of the birds, such as the Leghorns, Early hatching and good care gets pullets to laying before cold weather sets in and insures winter eggs if other conditions are right.

Second—Housing. Hens should be housed in quarters that are well ventilated. Otherwise there will be dampness which is not conducive to healthy laying. The house should be dry, and that it be warm. There should, however, be a warm roosting place provided. This may be done by arranging the roosting places so that a curtain of bur-lap or heavy muslin may be let down before the chickens after they have gone to roost. The hen-house should be so constructed that it will get all the sun possible on the floor. It means that the windows should be put low. It is well to have some of the window openings covered with glass, and others with wire netting with muslin curtains to be drawn over the openings in case of storm or at night in very cold weather.

Third—Exercise. The hens, to lay, must be provided with opportunity for exercise, the kind that hens usually indulge in, namely, scratching. This means that the windows should be put low. It is well to have some of the window openings covered with glass, and others with wire netting with muslin curtains to be drawn over the openings in case of storm or at night in very cold weather.

Fourth—Food. One of the first essentials under food, is variety. A hen that is fed on pick-up or even food, secures variety. We shut it out of the garden because it likes green food so well that it makes havoc with lettuce, beet tops, and weeds, etc. It also chases bugs and picks up a lot of worms, and gets seeds and grains in abundance. This gives us a clue to what the hens should have in winter. It is green food, green, and a deal of food. Green food is not so easy to provide in winter, but one who wishes winter eggs should lay in a supply of beets, or cabbage, or some succulent food, such as turnips, and a deal of food. Saturday's trade closed healthy, after a soft opening, with prices well up to the close of the previous session. Cattle Prices High. Beef and butcher cattle closed last week with advances across the board. The week's business was mostly in the morning, with a week ago, lightweights gaining most. The January hog run at eleven markets to date is 537,000 less than a year ago.

Quotations follow:

Bulk of sales $10.90 to $11.10. Heavy butchers and ship-ping $11.05 to $11.25. Light butchers $10.80 to $11.00. Light bacon $10.80 to $11.00. Heavy packing $10.80 to $11.00. The hens should not be frightened but handled gently and treated kindly. Boxes should be provided with wood shavings or road dirt for dust baths. Not a phenomenal yield but something that helps when prices are soaring as at present.

NO WHITE HOUSE LEAK, SAYS BARUCH

Testifying before a congressional committee Monday, Bernard Baruch, Wall Street financier and Wilson appointee, denied that he had been the author of a "leak" from the White House by which he profited at the time President Wilson sent his peace note. The charge was made in the house by Representative Wood of Indiana, Republican. Baruch made millions on the street because of previous knowledge that Wilson was to send a peace note.

"You put the card before the horse," he insisted. "No man ought to belong to a party. The party is a mere convenience, and it ought to belong to the man, like any other convenience, to serve him as it may or give way to something else as it may not." But the politicians hadn't been in the business all these years for nothing. They were good by no means to be talked out of a good thing. "We confront a condition and not a theory," they made answer. "The horse is so used to working that way he doesn't know there's any other."—New York Post.

It's because their Turkish blend is BALANCED

Balanced—that is what makes Fatima's blend comfortable, both while you're smoking and afterward, too.

The milder tobaccos in this Turkish blend are so well balanced with the richer, fuller-flavored leaves as to entirely off-set all "oily heaviness"—the cause of discomfort in so many other cigarettes.

And this very blending which makes Fatimas so comfortable (and therefore so sensible) is also just what imparts that unusually good Fatima taste.

But even so, you alone can decide whether or not you like Fatimas. That's easy to settle—try them.

"GOVERNOR" WHITTET?

It is a long time since a Rock county man has gone to the state legislature and made the impression upon the members of both the assembly and the senate as has Rock county's representative from the first district, who has twice been elected speaker, and whose work as the confidential adviser of Governor Philipp has made him known to the state over. Lawrence C. Whittet is one of the few men who have risen above their political faction and pleased all by the fairness and absolutely square treatment of all who have come in contact with him.

Small wonder then is that his name is prominently mentioned as the successor of Governor Philipp in the governor's office? Of course many a legislative boom for office has been lost sight of long before the time came for its realization, but in this case it is safe to say that Whittet's name will be more prominently mentioned when the legislature is not in session than when it is. He would make a most excellent state executive. He is in hearty accord with the plans for reorganization, the ideas of good government for the people and by the people and not by experimenters. He has the business of the state at his tongue's end, owing to his position as confidential adviser of the governor, and he would be in a position to carry out the work of the present administration, taking it up just where Philipp lays it down. Philipp is destined for higher office. His two terms as governor will fit him to become the candidate for the United States senatorship. With Philipp in Washington and Whittet in Madison, the state of Wisconsin would be well governed and well represented at the nation's capital. The boom for Mr. Whittet is not premature; it is simply following out the current of time.

DELAYS DANGEROUS.

Often times delays are most dangerous to the best interests of the fire chief at the high school gymnasium where the basketball game was played Saturday night, evidences that he is himself fearful that a panic, a fire, in fact one of a hundred causes, might result in the loss of life. The danger from this third floor of the high school structure has been touched upon for many years past. For many years the three days of graduation time were a horror for many parents who realized how dangerous this particular section of the building really was.

Time of the results to be accomplished by a survey would be how to remedy this. As the question of seats for the pupils, some adjustment so that students would not be cramped at their writing, would not have to be seated in uncomfortable positions so as to themselves in the desks furnished them. There are plenty of gray-haired men in Janesville and some younger ones, too, who will remember that when the clothing was issued in Sixty One and Sixty Eight, the short man always got the long trousers and the tall man always had a jacket with short sleeves. It is just so at the schools. The small boy has the big seat and the big boy the small one.

Students can not conserve their mental powers, can not center their thoughts on their studies, if they are working under unfavorable conditions. Mental brain fog is one thing, but physical tiredness is another and should be cared for immediately and a remedy found. The school board have decided upon a survey but they have not ordered it. Why the delay? Why not go ahead and order it? The members of the board are reported as becoming sensitive to suggestions, but still it is a fact that the people, the taxpayers of the city, are anxious for the best conditions possible. Let us have them.

NAVAL CAREERS.

The death of Admiral Dewey concentrates attention on one of the great naval careers of American history. As one reads the dramatic story of George Dewey's life, with its thrilling climax at Manila Bay, a great many of them will be fired with the ambition to enter this career. If the United States should be drawn into war, a great many young men now obscure would in a day become figures of history.

Those who long for money-making will not choose navy life. Republics are ungrateful, and most of our heroes have never received much financial reward.

But there are many solid advantages in a naval career. The strict discipline of these little kingdoms on shipboard produces a very self-controlled and self-ordered type of character. The navy man is alert, mentally and erect physically and morally. Their drill makes them quick thinkers. The possibility of war makes them very brave and resolute fellows. Any family with a naval officer among its boys is prouder of him than of the money-makers who stay at home and enter business.

Naval officers say that the navy has a more democratic spirit than the army. The various grades of the shipboard life meet in close quarters, and artificial distinctions could not live long.

American sentiment has decided that an increase of our navy is necessary in these times of world anarchy, and we need many bright young fellows in our ships. They should note that Dewey's great achievement was not due to any lack of chance, but to the fact that he had prepared himself for a historic emergency by a life of incessant industry, study, and technical skill.

The movement to have a day of thanksgiving and prayer because of the final adjournment of congress has been checked by the reflection that another one is coming along just like it.

The fact that a man is indifferent to reading his title clear to mansions in the skies, does not prove that he is indifferent about any defect in his automobile license.

The magazines claim that they should have low rates of postage because they are popular educators, and they proceed to prove it by putting red and yellow pictures of pretty girls on their covers.

The republicans and progressives are sitting down to harmony dinners after carefully locating the pocket where their knives are deposited.

If the common people don't behave and pay what is asked, the trusts are likely to put up prices again just to show them who owns this country.

After the ball players get their union formed ten inning game of course means time and a half for overtime.

Advertising keeps on talking at hours when the merchant and his clerks are off duty.

While it is the principal duty of a college president to get money for his institution, it should not be considered an objection if he also has a reputation for scholarship.

On the Spur of the Moment

ROY K. MOULTON

WE OUGHT TO KNOW!
A hand was upon a daily paper.

The motley muse he wooed. He often sat
Late with his work, beside the lonely taper.

And wrought thereat.
Full oft he sighed, "How weary is the mortal."

Who hopes with wit or jasper to
Who seeks to chase the lone, elusive chortle.

"The subtle wheeze."
And he would sigh, "What other souls that be have."

So dire a lot as I, so sad a chose?
Despair would come and he would sigh, as we have Remarked before.

"How sad" perhaps you murmur,
thus revealing
Some sympathy with one in woeful plight.

But let US add with somewhat greater feeling.
"How Sad is right!"

This Day in History.
Thirty-eight years ago today
the inventor of the car-trap died a lingering death after hanging on for several weeks.

Health Note.
Never, in a frenzy,
Sook your head in soup.
You'll get influenza
Maybe, or the group.

Our Just-Like-That Club.
Sir, Our small son had been missing him of the afternoon, though I happened to know he had gone to call on his aunt. My wife noticed his absence and turned to me to ask "What can the child be doing?" I replied, quick as a flash,
"He's up to his aunt's!"—Grover.

Sure.
This much at least in life is true,
When everything is said,
The fellow who agrees with you,
He has a level head.

A MOMENT WITH THE MUSE

The Evening Hour.
The homeward wends the weary dad to eat, to read and hit the hay, to romp awhile with lass or lad, that is the season of the day! For though the daily stint may vex, when shades of night begin to lower, forget the troubles that perplex, enjoy the pleasant evening hour. When we were only little lads did we not then with joy await the home-coming of our dad, to romp to meet them at the gate? Who has a cheerful wife and kids to meet him when the day is done, though he must buy them shoes and kds, though he must hump and get the mail, though many are the bills he pays, his are the joys of this sad vale, he has, indeed, the happy days. How desolate and sad must he be when he wends the way alone, who never at the close of day has clearness from his worries from his home-coming wend a happy way, cheered by the thought of kids and frau.

Alas!
Sometimes, alas, a tooth must ache.
And woe! things must come to pass.
The hopes we have, the plans we make Must come to grief, sometimes,
alas!
We take a cold or take a wife.
Or long unsettled bills beside.
Sometimes, alas, the bread of life
Must fall upon the buttered side!

Little Paul Emanuel Peck
Wrote his little sister's neck
"When he tried the baby's kiss."

Mother said, "Now that'll do!"

The German pound is exactly one-half a kilogram or about one-tenth heavier than the American or British pound.

Powerful Effect.
"The people who preach economy for others sometimes have to turn in and practice economy for themselves," said a railroad man. "I once asked a business man:

"Well, George, did you read your wife that lecture on economy you said you were going to?"

"Yep," George grunted, with a gesture of disgust.

"Have any effect?" said I.

"It sure did," said George. "I've bought myself a safety razor, cut out cigars in favor of a pipe and had last season's suit cleaned so as to make it see me through this year."—Washington Star.

Superstitious Musicians.
Musicians are often singularly superstitious. Paderewski once ordered an expensive apartment in London, but refused to enter when he found it was No. 13 of a certain street, although he paid for it. Massenet has written twenty-one operas and many other compositions, but on all of his manuscripts page 12½ is written in place of 13.

Testing Diamonds.
In order to determine accurately the nature of diamonds it is well to breathe on them. Then they lose for a moment their luster, and the eye is then better enabled, says the Scientific American supplement, to examine them and distinguish their faults. The real diamond becomes clear much sooner than the false.

Parents Hide Their Blind Children

"Parents of blind children take every possible effort to hide them in order to keep their defective offspring at home."

This is the statement of Supt. J. T.
Hooper, superintendent of the school for blind, who was in Madison recently in connection with state work. Mr.
Hooper declared that parents seem to fear that their blind children will not be properly cared for in the state school and go so far as to hide them from the census taker so that the authorities will not find out where they are.

Only Visit Needed.
"We have found that this is almost always the case, except where the parents have visited the blind school and seen the work we are doing there," said Mr. Hooper. "When they find the children making as rapid progress in school as they do in the public schools learning practical work and receiving the best of care from people who are in deepest sympathy and understanding with them, there is little trouble experienced. If we could only get all the parents of blind children to visit the school, our difficulties would be solved."

There are now 135 patients and students at the school for blind at Janesville. This is less than 50 per cent of the total number of blind children in the state.

The Daily Novelette

THE CRAB'S HAIR SHIRT.

Long before the ancient days when Gow Chin wrote "Four Million Little Rules of Living" in two thousand volumes, Lay Off, a humble inhabitant of Chow Main, who loved his wife only less than he loved his honorable country, was presented by Wun Two, his young and beautiful spouse, with a shirt woven out of crab's hair, by her own fair hands. (See Eloise
Glee's Chinese: Clothes in the Ding
Bow Dynasty.)

Now this crab's hair shirt itched
Lay Off like the dickens. And yet, for fear of offending Wun Two, he hated to scratch. It itched back and it itched front and it itched on the sides, and it itched without ceasing.

"Lay Off!" cried Wun Two, "what are you wriggling for?"

"Wriggling, sun of my day and moon of my night," exclaimed Lay Off, as he repressed a desire to rub the small of his back against the large of the wall. (See Maude Offenon's "Prehistoric Methods of Scratching.")

"Yes, wriggling, seventh son of a grinning haboon!" cried the fair but peppery Wun Two. "I'll give you something to wriggle for!" And forthwith she took up a great wooden fork and belabored Lay Off upon the back. And Lay Off stood there and cried, "Oh! Oh! Oh!" And each Oh was an Oh of ecstasy, and not, as Wun Two fancied, of pain.

And thus sprang into life the Chinese back scratcher.

OLD HADLEY where a regicide of Charles I appeared "from

HISTORIC SCENES IN OLD NEW ENGLAND

OLD HADLEY where a regicide of Charles I appeared "from nowhere" and saved the panic stricken settlers

Old Hadley, a beautiful New England town, situated upon the east bank of the Connecticut River some twenty miles north of Springfield, Mass., was a center of great activity during the stirring days of King Philip's Indian wars. On Sept. 1, 1675, while at worship in the village meeting house, the inhabitants of Old Hadley were surprised by an attack upon their settlement by a horde of Indians.

Abandoning worship, they seized their arms and rushed out to defend their homes, but the suddenness of the attack found them utterly demoralized. When the confusion was at its height there suddenly appeared in their midst an unknown man of grave and elderly bearing, who at once took command of the situation, issued orders, rallied the defenders and in short order routed the redskins from the town. Then, as suddenly as he had appeared, did the stranger effect his removal from the scene, and his identity for many years remained a comparative mystery.

It was later established that the deliverer of Hadley was General William Goffe, one of the three living regicides of Charles I. and for whose head a liberal bounty was offered. After years of pursuit from place to place he found safe hiding under the hospitable roof of Pastor John Russel of the Old Hadley congregation. It is believed that after his spectacular deliverance of the Hadley settlers he remained still undiscovered in the Russel household until his death some five years later.

A beautiful state road winding up the Connecticut valley takes thousands of autoists each year directly by the spot where General Goffe rallied the inhabitants of Old Hadley to the defense of their homes.

SAFE FARMING

YOU DON'T NEED TO LOSE YOUR HOGS FROM CHOLERA.

By PROF. P. G. HOLDEN.

Cholera germs are carried just the same as smallpox, diphtheria, scarlet fever, or any other contagious disease germs. People, animals and birds, anything that walks on the ground and comes from a farm where the hogs have cholera, may bring cholera to your herd.

Precautions—If cholera is in your neighborhood, use the same precautions to keep from getting it on your farm as you would use if there were an epidemic of smallpox or scarlet fever.

If your neighbor's hogs have cholera, don't go to look at them. Don't let your neighbor come on your place. He may carry cholera germs on his shoes. Keep the hog buyer and all visitors away from the hog lot.

If some of your hogs are sick, and you suspect that they have cholera, get busy.

Cholera causes fever, generally accompanied either by constipation of the bowels or by diarrhea. The hogs are "off feed," the odor of the urine is offensive, there is generally a discharge from the eyes, and, when they stand, there is a disposition to get their feet together, thus humping the back.

But a hog may have cholera several days before any of these symptoms is pronounced; then, too, these symptoms, or most of them, may accompany a bad case of worms, or inflammation of the lungs, or some other disease.

Determine at once whether or not a sick hog has the cholera. Get a veterinarian, kill the hog, and examine the intestines, kidneys, glands, and other organs.

If it is cholera, act quickly. Send at once for the vaccine. Do not take time to write for it. Have your veterinarian or your banker wire to your State Agricultural College.

Do not attempt to vaccinate the hogs yourself. Keep the vaccine cool, and use it just as soon as possible after it comes.

The vaccine loses its effectiveness rapidly if allowed to stand where it is warm.

Do not vaccinate until your first hog is taken with cholera, or until cholera is so close to you that you are certain your hogs will get it.

The Serum Treatment. Ordinarily, you should vaccinate with serum only. Serum contains no live cholera germs, but has in it certain elements that combat cholera germs.

The serum treatment is effective four to six weeks.

At the end of this time your hogs must be vaccinated again, if there is still danger of their being exposed to cholera.

Vaccinating with serum only is called the "Serum Treatment" or "Single Treatment." In practically all cases, this is the only method that should be used.

Simultaneous or Double Treatment. In rare cases, it may seem advisable to vaccinate with virus at the same time you vaccinate with serum.

Virus is taken from the blood of a hog while he is sick with cholera; therefore it is full of live cholera germs.

The object of using virus is to give the hogs cholera. The serum given at the same time fights and checks the cholera germs which the virus contains.

When they recover, they are immune from cholera; that is, they will not have cholera again, no matter how many times they may be exposed to it.

Remember, that when you use virus you are bringing hog cholera germs on your place. Don't use it under any circumstances, unless cholera is already on your farm.

Even this should not be done unless cholera is elsewhere in the vicinity. Be fair to your neighbors. If you use virus on your farm, you are bringing cholera into your neighborhood. It may get to your neighbor's hogs. You have no right to make them run this risk.

Many of the best authorities think virus should never be used, and some states and some countries absolutely prohibit the use of it.

Burn All Hogs That Die of Cholera. To burn a hog, dig a trench, put the fuel in the bottom of it and place the hog on poles across the top.

After cholera has been in your herd, dip all of the hogs and thoroughly disinfect the premises.

For disinfecting, a whitewash of lime and carbolic acid, or any of the commercial disinfectant spraying mixtures, can be used.

If cholera is on your farm, post a sign, "Hog Cholera Here." This is only fair to your neighbors.

Use all precautions to keep cholera from your hogs. If cholera gets in your herd, save your hogs by vaccinating them at once. Don't sit down and wait.

Testing Diamonds. In order to determine accurately the nature of diamonds it is well to breathe on them. Then they lose for a moment their luster, and the eye is then better enabled, says the Scientific American supplement, to examine them and distinguish their faults. The real diamond becomes clear much sooner than the false.

Superstitious Musicians. Musicians are often singularly superstitious. Paderewski once ordered an expensive apartment in London, but refused to enter when he found it was No. 13 of a certain street, although he paid for it. Massenet has written twenty-one operas and many other compositions, but on all of his manuscripts page 12½ is written in place of 13.

POTATOES AS FOOD ESSENTIAL FACTOR

Potatoes Perform Important Function in Keeping Body Tissues Alkaline.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.—The general use of potatoes in the average family and the better customs of eating in many hotels and restaurants, for food and based on sound economic and hygienic reasons, according to specialists of the office of home economics of the United States department of agriculture, are factors of the preparation and use of potatoes as food are reported in the department of agriculture bulletin No. 185, recently issued.

Potatoes are easy to cook in a variety of ways. From the point of view of dietetics, they furnish starch in an easily digestible form, contain mineral substances of importance to the body, and are not less generally known for their value in supplying energy to the body. Potatoes, like most vegetables, perform an important function in that they possess the property of making the body alkaline, so counteracting the tendency of meats, eggs, fish and like foods to create acid conditions. Since the body loses its work best when its condition is either neutral or slightly alkaline, potatoes, like most vegetables, perform an important function in that they possess the property of making the body alkaline, so counteracting the tendency of meats, eggs, fish and like foods to create acid conditions.

Potatoes, however, while a valuable addition to a mixed diet, alone are not suited to meet the needs of the body because of their low content of protein and fat. These latter important elements are furnished in meats, eggs, fish, milk, beans and similar foods, and fat in butter, bacon, tallow and the fats and oils used in cooking.

Preparing Potatoes Which Have Been Kept Over from Winter.
Greater care than common is exercised in preparing potatoes. Very often 25 per cent of the potato is wasted. This results not only in the waste of considerable food, but also in the loss of one of the most valuable portions of the tuber, since the soluble mineral salts are present in the material near the skin, which would be removed and thrown away. These salts, which have been kept until late in the spring, since in this way more of the disagreeable flavor is eliminated. Such potatoes may also be soaked before cooking.

Parties before boiling, however, may be the most desirable method cooking potatoes which through an undue exposure of light may have acquired a bitter taste, or those which have been kept until late in the spring, since in this way more of the disagreeable flavor is eliminated. Such potatoes may also be soaked before cooking. The boiling method may be desirable with potatoes which have been exposed to light, they result in the loss of considerable food value. Potatoes which are soaked before cooking are not so good as those which are boiled in water. The loss of mineral salts is about the same by either method. There is no loss of starch material in boiling unless portions of the tuber break off.

Practically the only loss when potatoes are boiled in water is the loss of water which escapes as steam. The more or less common custom of peeling potatoes in the skin of baked potatoes or breaking them is explained by the fact that the skin of the potato is so tough that it is allowed to escape. It will change back into water and produce softness.

Special considerations.
Potatoes which are turned green and sprouting tubers have present a considerable quantity of solanine, a very poisonous substance which, though not so dangerous in the quantities ordinarily met with, gives a disagreeable flavor. It is best, therefore, to avoid such potatoes or to cut out green or sprouting portions.

NEWS NOTES—MOVIELAND

John Barrymore has just begun work under the direction of Herbert Brenon on a photo-drama, "The Lone Wolf," which was published in the Gazette last spring. This will be the first appearance of this popular star in moving pictures in nearly two years. His last season was devoted to the spoken drama, and his success as Falder in Galsworthy's "Justice" was one of the big theatrical events of the year.

Mr. Barrymore had been regarded previously as a light comedian, and the power he displayed in his interpretation of the role of the victim of the processes of law was a revelation of his dramatic powers.

When he plays "The Lone Wolf" he will have opportunity for demonstrating his talent in both the lighter and the heavier branches of his art.

By engaging John Barrymore, Mr. Brenon has made an exception to his rule to feature none but women stars in his productions. He is so impressed with the possibilities of "The Lone Wolf" however, that he is anxious to produce it, and as it would be like featuring Opheila in "Hamlet" to try to develop any of the feminine roles, important as several of them are to stellar dimensions.

Mr. Brenon has pigeon-holed his general principle for the present.

NEWS NOTES—MOVIELAND

John Barrymore has just begun work under the direction of Herbert Brenon on a photo-drama, "The Lone Wolf," which was published in the Gazette last spring. This will be the first appearance of this popular star in moving pictures in nearly two years. His last season was devoted to the spoken drama, and his success as Falder in Galsworthy's "Justice" was one of the big theatrical events of the year.

Mr. Barrymore had been regarded previously as a light comedian, and the power he displayed in his interpretation of the role of the victim of the processes of law was a revelation of his dramatic powers.

When he plays "The Lone Wolf" he will have opportunity for demonstrating his talent in both the lighter and the heavier branches of his art.

Heart and Home Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson
Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two girls, sixteen years old.

(1) When meeting your friend with a boy, who should speak first, the girl or the boy?

(2) When a girl is walking with two boys, should she walk in the middle?

(3) What is a suitable gift for a girl to carry?

(4) When getting out of a street car, who should get off first, the girl or the boy?

(5) We are going to get a bunch of flowers together and have a party. Will it be necessary to have a chaperone?

THANK YOU.
matter. Probably both will speak about the same time.

boys like to have her walk in the middle, and it is all right for her to do so. Some think it looks better for the two boys to walk on the outside. It is foolish to give the matter any thought.

(3) In most cases girls make a mistake if they marry before they are twenty. Married life carries with it many responsibilities which very young girls are not ready to meet.

(4) The boy. (5) Yes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a sixteen year old girl.

(1) Am I too young to be engaged?

(2) Do you think it proper to go to a party with a boy?

(3) Do you think it right for a girl to wear a boy's ring?

SLEEPING BEAUTY.
(1) Yes.

(2) It is proper if you go in the daytime.

(3) No, a girl should not wear a boy's jewelry.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have fallen in love with my school teacher. Would it be all right to ask to take her home?

BLACKIE.

and the women left the room with a great air of mystery. You are excited. (1) At dinner time, called Marjory over her shoulder. "Only be sure to be on time for then I will tell you my secret."

"What are those two up to?" Tom asked of his father who sat smoking his morning cigar before going to the mill.

"Can't say. When you have been married as long as I have you will have grown used to secrets and surprises. Women are never happy unless they are pulling off some such stunt. Come on to the mill with me. I have some things to talk over with you. So the coast is clear to Marjory. Mrs. Gerard gave her a free hand after advising her to use the best china on which to display her cookery. The air was full of appetizing smells, but neither of the women was in evidence. Tom peeked into the dining room.

"It's company. The table is all dolled up in the best china. I wonder who is coming?"

"All I ask is haste. This wind has whetted my appetite till I cannot answer for what may happen in the going does not sound pretty soon, answered his father. Tom laughed, saying, "Same here."

They had not long to wait till Marjory, flushed and somewhat nervous, announced dinner.

"Who's here?" Tom whispered before she passed out.

"No one. Why?"

"Why all this gorgeousness?" he asked.

"I'll relieve the suspense by telling you that this dinner has been cooked and served by—Marjory." Mrs. Gerard brought out the word very impressively.

"Not really?" sang out Tom. "You directed Mother."

"I was not even in the kitchen. Look by the side of your plate and you will understand."

"This in addition to working all day in the office?" he asked in astonishment as she read the grades of one Marjory Gerard in a course in cooking.

"It was fun to prepare this surprise. Now eat your dinner before it is spoiled. The proof of the pudding is in the eating. If you like it, I am more than paid for all my work."

"You will have to look out for your laurels, Mother, if the little girl begins like this," said Tom, smiling across at his wife's happy face.

Household Hints

WHOOPING COUGH REMEDY.

Mix one lemon (sliced), one-fourth pint flaxseed, two ounces honey, two tablespoons pulverized rock candy, one quart water.

Sham, boil for four hours, strain (when cool) through bag. If there is less than a pint, after simmering add hot water to make the pint. Keep in a cool place.

Dose: One tablespoon four times a day and one also after each severe fit of coughing. Is said to cure in four days if given when the child first whoops.

ORANGE MARMALADE.

January is the month for making orange marmalade.

Rather sour oranges with smooth skin are best. Weigh the oranges and allow three-fourths their weight in sugar. Remove peel in quarters; cover with boiling water and cook until tender. Drain, cool, and remove the inner white part with a spoon.

Cut this thin yellow rind into thin strips with a sharp knife. Place in sections, remove the white skin and seeds, place in preserving kettle and when at the boiling point, commence adding the sugar gradually. Add the bits of rind and cook one hour longer. Pour into glasses.

THE TABLE.

Tomato Cream Soup—Put tomatoes through sieve, put on stove to heat. Now take a saucer, dip in what but, add milk until you have a creamy broth, then add pinch of soda to the tomatoes so as not to curdle. Put both ingredients together; serve with crackers. Excellent and economical.

Nut Bread—One and one-half pints of flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon lard, one teaspoon sugar, one egg, one-half cup milk, one-half cup yeast cake, three-quarters cup chopped nut meats. Place yeast and sugar in the lukewarm water and let stand until yeast comes to top. Rub lard into flour, add salt, nut meats and yeast; knead, using more flour if necessary until dough is soft and elastic. Place dough in warm place until it has risen. Mold into one loaf. Place in greased pan and let rise again until light. Bake in moderate oven from forty-five to sixty minutes. To change the dough may be made into rolls and baked in a quick oven.

Eggless Pumpkin Pie—One pint milk, one small cup sugar, one cup sifted pumpkin, one-half cup graham cracker crumbs, one-half cup raisins, salt—one-half teaspoon of each. This makes one pie. Bake slowly.

Cherry Pudding (serves six people)—One egg, one cup sugar, one tablespoon butter, one-half cup milk, one-half cup cherries, one level teaspoon baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon vanilla. Mix ingredients as you would any cake. Place one and one-half cups of canned cherries with four tablespoons of the juice in the bottom of a square cake pan ("square" because the pudding can be taken out in square pieces and to better advantage), then place the batter over the cherries. Bake in moderate oven for more than one-half inch of batter on the cherries), put in slow oven and bake twenty-five minutes or until cake is done. Serve plain or with whipped cream—delicious either way. Do not grease the pan, as the steam from cherries keeps cake from sticking. Any kind of canned fruit may be used instead of cherries.

Baked Indian Pudding—Scald one quart milk and one-half cup cornmeal and one-half cup molasses; stir and cook ten minutes; add a little salt, cinnamon and a few raisins; pour in buttered dish; pour one pint cold milk over top; bake in a slow oven from three to four hours.

Steam Brown Bread—One cup flour, one cup cornmeal, one cup graham flour, half cup molasses, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon soda, mix with sour milk or buttermilk or water; batter should run. Steam in coffee tins three hours in kettle of boiling water. Keep water boiling all the time.

NEW YORKERS HAVE FIRST BLACK WEDDING ON RECORD.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
New York, Jan. 22.—(Ors) One Powder Puff Prince and designer of women's gowns and Eleanor Klingler, fashion model, were married at St. Vincent de Paul's here today. Theirs was the first "black wedding" on record.

Except for the white principals, the affair was as black as the ace of spades. Wedding traditions were hauled out in a bunch and smashed to pieces. The bride was clad in jet black from her hair and earrings to her toes. The groom wore a black suit, black silk shirt, black linen collar and black gloves.

Later the wedding breakfast at the bride's home was served by black waiters in black. The menu consisted of blackberry cocktails, black bass, black bread, black coffee. It seemed like everything black in the world was there but despair.

"Black," said the bridegroom, "is the ideal color for weddings. As mourning it is losing its significance. No one wears mourning any more. And black is cheaper and more serviceable than any other color."

The couple departed on the Black Diamond express for a honeymoon tour through the principal cities of the west. They said they would give those places a chance to look them over.

THE WATCHMAN COLUMN
Tables.

The table proper is a piece of dining room furniture supported by hand carved legs and father's pocketbook. It is the family table, or table that the family sit at.

The table is the family table by its diversity of uses. The table is sometimes sat at, often sat on, and not infrequently sat under, depending upon the ebriate condition of the seers.

Then we have the round table. The round-table is what government officials sit at when they don't want to be on the square. The only other species of round-table is the one of which you get a square meal for fifteen cents.

Tables also are what we turn on folks to show them they are not so smart as they think they are.

That leaves the time table. The time table is an instrument of torture designed to keep you from finding out when your train goes.

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

AEROPHAGY, OR EATING AIR.

Many dyspeptics eat air unconsciously when excited, anxious or distressed.

Persons with stomach trouble or with organic disease or functional disease elsewhere secondarily disturbing stomach function, are apt to have some gas in the stomach, or rather an excess of it, for gas forms with normal digestion. This excess of gas, from fermentation of food that has not digested promptly, induces a sense of pressure which is relieved by belching. The patient remembers the relief thus produced, and when a similar attack of pressure, fullness, distension or pains comes, he believes he can get relief by belching the gas from the stomach. An effort is required to do this, and in the effort air is unconsciously swallowed, to be belched up again with great explosive force, and noise. While nervous or neurotic individuals are most likely to swallow air, the habit is more or less common to all sufferers with stomach disturbances.

Gum chewers, by persistently swallowing, swallow a large quantity of air. Persons subject to post-nasal "catarrh" swallowing mucus, likewise swallow much air. But in neither class is there any apparent distress from the air in the stomach. Indeed, there is small ground for the belief that gas in the stomach or bowel ever causes pain or distress amounting to more than a sense of fullness, distension or uncomfortable pressure. The pain, burning, cramp or colic associated with such attacks is generally due to the irritation of acids, muscle spasm associated with inflammation, or organic disease independent of the presence of gas or air. As has been repeatedly described in this column, attacks of "acute indigestion" accompanied by "great distress and pain and oppression" ("gas pressing around the heart"), attributed by many to "acute indigestion" are usually a middle aged man's victim—usually a middle aged man's victim.

There are different heart diseases. In former articles you stated that there are mechanical tests to distinguish different heart diseases. Please tell me how to make these tests. (R. G.)

ANSWER—No. I described some tests of the heart's efficiency. The tests do not distinguish between different heart diseases. For instance, if you can hold your breath thirty or more seconds (40 is normal) you have a fairly efficient heart.

A TIP.

As I held down the plush in a seat of a coach in a swiftly moving train, and lapped the surroundings, and took in the sights, and hummed an old-time refrain, just loquacious and killing the time, by the way, not an object or purpose in sight. I chanced to observe in the seat next to mine—a tip that put me to the right. For there sat a lady improving the time, no moments from her slipped away, she worked with a will that accomplishes much, crowding all that she could in each day. Contentment and happiness showed in her face; industrious, cheerful, sincere, with confidence plus she attentively worked, no time for a worry or fear. She sure made that fancy work travel along, I said as I watched her awhile, "It pays to keep busy, it has its reward, it's a stunt doesn't get out of style." And then I concluded no more would I loaf and squander much valuable time, for work is the tonic that gives us the strength to stick and make good in the climb.

The Highflyers

Tom Gets the Surprise of His Life, And it's a Happy One.

"Now, Mother," Mrs. Gerard loved to hear her daughter-in-law say that word, "I want to ask a favor. I want to get a meal all alone as a surprise to Tom. You know I have told him nothing about my course in domestic science. Before I took that course I could not boil water without burning it. I ruined two teapots in my muddling efforts to get our breakfasts."

"What a surprise it will be to the boy," Mrs. Gerard was all enthusiasm for the plan. "How did you ever come up with absolutely no knowledge of cooking?"

"Oh, it is easy to avoid learning what you are not interested in. Besides we lived in a tiny flat, Auntie, and most of our meals were cooked by the maid. I was not surprised to learn that she did all the cooking and housework."

"When I was married I knew very little about cooking, but I was interested that I soon picked up a workable knowledge of it," remarked the older woman. "I wonder you did not take to trying experiments in your cozy kitchen in the flat."

"One would think so," replied Marjory. "Any normal girl would, I suppose, but I had other ambitions. I wanted to climb socially—and I did," she added with a shiver.

"You like it now, the cooking?" continued Mrs. Gerard.

"We all like to do what we can do well. I am proud of the success I made at the school. I have registered in the correspondence school, and now to finish the entire course when we get settled at Fairport."

Tom stared the next day when Marjory refused to go for a walk with him, giving an excuse that she had something very important to do. "What have you got on hand?" he asked in surprise.

"Your mother and I have something that we have planned to do," she replied with a twinkle in her eyes. "That's all, Tom."

"Am I the victim of a conspiracy?" "Just that," answered his mother.

neighbor in such a statement before. She has told me many things which I have accepted as unquestionably so, because she has a large authoritative manner that predisposes one to be impressed by what she says. But since I have checked her up in one unfounded statement, I know I shall not be able to help wondering if all her statements are born of intuition rather than knowledge.

Men Can't Mix Fact and Fancy So Much.

Women, I think, are more prone to this habit than men. Men have to know, rather than think. The world they live in demands it of them. They may sometimes make unfounded statements, but they are more apt to qualify them by "I think" or "I bet."

And yet I have met a few men who had this habit. One of these constantly announces the most astonishing things as facts. One was that Roosevelt wanted to be King of America, that he knew beyond question. Who told him? Nobody. He knew it. You might judge from this instance that he is rather unbalanced. Yet he is an unusually successful young business man.

The only answer, to my mind, is that he must keep this habit for his social life and exclude it from his business intercourse.

Nan of Music Mountain

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN
Author of "WHISPERING SMITH"

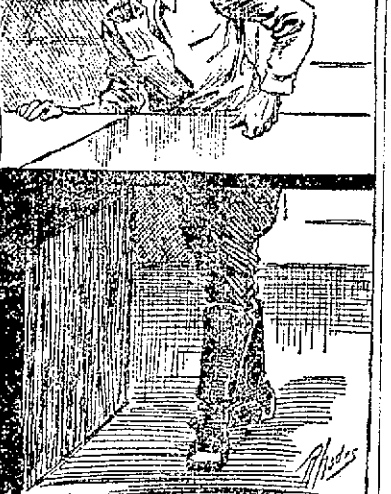

(Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons)

"Go right down to the inn, sir. It's a new chap running it—a half-witted ninn from Texas. My wife is cooking there off and on. She'll fix you up a sandwich and a cup of good coffee."

It was four o'clock, and the sun beat fiercely on the desert. De Spain walked down to the inn unaided of the heat. In summer time, with his soft-shirt coat turned under, his forehead bare, and his thoughts engaged, he made his way rapidly on, looking neither to the right nor the left.

As he neared the weather-beaten pile that looked no more inviting in sunshine than it had looked in shadow; and, true to its traditions, not a living being was anywhere to be seen. The door of the office stood ajar. De Spain, pushing it all the way open, walked in. No one greeted him as he crossed the threshold, and the unsightly room was still bare of furnishings except for the bar, with its two broken mirrors.

De Spain pounded on the bar. His effort to attract attention met with no response. He walked to the left end of the bar, lifted the handrail that inclosed the space behind it, and pushed open the door between the mirrors leading to the back room. This, too, was empty. He called out—there was no response. Mrs. McAlpin had apparently gone home for a while.

He Called Out—There Was No Response.

Irritated at the desertion of the place, due, he afterward learned, to the heat of the afternoon, and disappointed at the frustration of his purpose, he walked back to the office. As he lifted the handrail and, passing through, lowered it behind him, he took out his watch to see how soon the stage was due. While he held the timepiece in his hand he heard a rapid clatter of hoofs approaching the place. Thinking it might be Scott and Lefever arriving from the south an hour ahead of time, he started toward the front door—where was still open—to greet them. Outside, hurried footsteps reached the door just ahead of him and a large man, stepping quickly into the room, confronted De Spain. One of the man's hands rested lightly on his right side. De Spain recognized him instantly; the small, drooping head, carried well forward, the keen eyes, the loud-patterned, shabby waistcoat proclaimed beyond doubt—Deaf Sandusky.

CHAPTER IX.

The Glass Stopped.

Even as the big fellow stepped lightly just inside and to the left—as De Spain stood—of the door and faced him, the encounter seemed to De Spain accidental. But before he could speak, a second man appeared in the doorway, and this man appeared to be joking with a third, behind him. As the second man crossed the threshold, De Spain saw Sandusky's high-voiced little fighting cry. Logan, who now made way, as he stepped within to the right of the open door, for the swinging shoulders and rolling stride of Gale Morgan.

Morgan, eying De Spain with insolence, as was his wont, closed the door behind him with a bang. Then he backed his powerful frame significantly against it.

A blind man could have seen the completeness of the snare. An unpleasant feeling flashed across De Spain's perception. It was only for the immediate uncertainty was resolving itself into a rapid certainty. When Gale Morgan stepped into the room on the heels of his two Calabasas friends, De Spain would have sold for less than a cup of coffee all his chances for life. Nevertheless, before Morgan had set his back fairly against the door and the trap was sprung, De Spain had mapped his fight.

He did not retreat from where he halted at the instant Sandusky entered. His own slender chance was to hug to the men that meant to kill him. Morgan, the nearest, he esteemed the least dangerous of the three; but to think to escape both Sandusky and Logan at close quarters was, he knew, more than ought to be hoped for.

While Morgan was closing the door, De Spain smiled at his visitors: "That isn't necessary, Morgan—I'm not ready to run." Morgan only continued to stare at him. "I need hardly say," added De Spain, "whether your fellows have business with me?"

He looked to Sandusky for a reply; it was Logan who answered in shrill falsetto: "No. We don't happen to have business that I know of. A friend of ours may have a little, maybe?" Logan, lifting his shoulders with his laugh, looked toward his companions for an answer to his joke.

De Spain's smile appeared unaffected: "You'll help him transact it, I suppose?"

Logan, looking again toward Sandusky, grinned: "He won't need any help."

"Who is your friend?" demanded De Spain good-naturedly. Logan's glance misted him; it did not refer to Sandusky. And even as he asked the question De Spain heard through the half-open window at the end of the bar the sound of hoofs. Hoping against hope for Lefever, the interruption cheered him. It certainly did not seem that his situation could be made worse.

"Well," answered Logan, "I'm going again to his gallery of cronies. We've got two or three fellows that want to see you. They're waiting outside to see what you'll look like in about five minutes—won't they, Gale?"

Someone was moving within the rear room. De Spain felt hope in every footfall he heard, and the mention of Morgan's name cleared his plan of battle. Before Gale, with an oath, could blurt out his answer, De Spain had resolved to fight where he stood, taking Logan first and Morgan as he should jump in between the two. It was at the best a hopeless venture against Sandusky's first shot, which De Spain knew was almost sure to reach a vital spot. But desperate men cannot be choosers.

"There's no time for seeing me like the present," declared De Spain, ignoring Morgan and addressing his words to Logan. "Bring your friends in. What are you complaining about, Morgan?" he asked, resenting the stream of abuse that Gale hurled at him whenever he could get a word in. "I had my turn at you with a rifle the other day. You've got your turn now. And I call it a pretty soft one, too—don't you, Sandusky?" he demanded suddenly of the big fellow.

Sandusky alone through the talk had kept an unbroken silence. He was eating up De Spain with his eyes, and De Spain not only ached to hear him speak, but was resolved to make him. Sandusky had stood motionless from the instant he entered the room. His eyes rested intently on De Spain, and at his side the long fingers of his right hand beat a soft tattoo against his pistol holster. De Spain's question seemed to arouse him. "What's your name?" he demanded bluntly. His voice was heavy and his deafness was reflected in the strained tone.

"It's on the butt of my gun, Sandusky."

"What's that he says?" demanded the man known as the butcher, asking the question of Logan, but without taking his eyes off his shifty prey.

Logan raised his voice to repeat the words and to add a ribald comment. "You make a good deal of noise," muttered Sandusky, speaking again to De Spain.

"That ought not to bother you much, Sandusky," shouted De Spain, trying to win a smile from his taciturn antagonist.

"His noise won't bother anybody much longer," put in Logan, whose reports overflowed at every interval. But there was no smile even hinted at in the uncompromising vigilance of Sandusky's expressionless face. De Spain discounted the next few minutes far enough to feel that Sandusky's first shot would mean death to him, even if he could return it.

"Logan, tell De Spain," continued Logan, "we're going to have a drink with you. Then we're going to prepare you for going back where you come from—with nice flowers."

"I guess you thought you could come out here and run over everybody in the Spanish sinks," interposed Morgan, with every word he could summon to land his words.

"Keep out, Morgan," exclaimed Logan testily. "I'll do this talking." De Spain continued to banter. "The gentlemen," he said, addressing the three together and realizing that every moment wasted before the shooting added a grain of hope, "I am ready to drink when you are."

"He's ready to drink, Tom," roared Morgan in the deaf man's ear.

"I'm ready," announced Sandusky in hollow voice.

Still regarding De Spain with the most businesslike expression, the grizzled outlaw took a guarded step forward, his companions following suit. De Spain, always with a jealous regard for the relative distance between him and his self-appointed executioners, moved backward. In crossing the room, Sandusky, without objection from his companions, moved across their front, and when the four lined up at the bar, their positions had changed. De Spain stood at the extreme left, Sandusky next, Logan beside him, and Gale Morgan, at the other end of the line, pretended to pound the bar for service. De Spain, following mountain etiquette in the circumstances, spread his open hands, palms down, on the bar. Sandusky's great palms slid in the same fashion over the checked slab in unspoken recognition of the brief armistice. Logan's hands came up in turn, and Morgan still pounded for someone to serve.

De Spain in the new disposition weighed his chances as being both better and worse. They had put Sandusky's first shot at no more than an arm's length from his prey, with Logan next, to cover the possibility of the big fellow's failing to paralyze De Spain the first instant. On the other hand, De Spain, trained in the tactics of Whispering Smith and Medicine Bend gunmen, welcomed a short-arm struggle with the worst of his assailants closest at hand. Their maneuvering caused no disrespect to their slender, compactly built victim. "You'll wait a long time, if you wait for service here, Morgan," he said, commenting with composure on Morgan's impatience. Logan looked again at his two companions and laughed.

Every hope De Spain had of possible help from the back room died with that laugh. Then the door behind the bar slowly opened, and the scar-featured face of Sassoon peered cautiously from the gloom. The horsethief, stooping, walked in with a leer directed triumphantly at the railroad man.

If it were possible to deepen it, the sinister spot on De Spain's face darkened. Something in his blood raged at the sight of the malevolent face. He glanced at Logan. "This," he smiled faintly, nodding toward Sassoon as he himself took a short step further to the left, "is your drink, Harvey, is it?"

"No," retorted Logan loudly, "this is your drink."

"I'll take Sassoon," assented De Spain, good-natured again and shifting still another step to the left. "What do you fellows want now?"

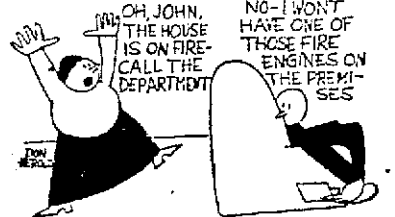

"We want to punch a hole through that strawberry," said Logan, "that beauty-mark. Where did you get it, De Spain?"

"I might as well ask where you get your gall, Harvey," returned De Spain, watching Logan lurch Sandusky toward the left that both might crowd him closer. "I was born with my beauty-mark—just as you were born with your d—d bad manners." He added composedly, for in hugging up to him his enemies were playing his game. "You can't help it, neither can I," he went on. "Somebody is bound to pay for putting that mark on me. Somebody is bound to pay for my manners. Why talk about either? Sassoon, set out for your friends—or I will. Spread, gentlemen, spread!"

FIRE ENGINES

Fire engines make such a fuss, that there is always a question as to whether it wouldn't be better to let the building burn down.

It is a very grave matter to send in a fire alarm and people should think a trifle before they have fires. Sending in a fire alarm is apt to upset the daily program of ten to twenty firemen completely. And then, without investigating, the firemen will get out the fire engine and come to your home.

On the way to your house, the firemen will ring bells and blow whistles and stir up the whole town. They will interrupt the rhythm of traffic, and the contemplation and meditation of pedestrians. Firemen have a way of informing everybody that they are on their way to put out a fire. They will make a very public matter of your fire.

The best people are not having fires these days. Oh, perhaps they have small fires, but they simply throw a bucket of water on the flames instead of dragging their fire into the limelight by calling the department.

Fire will be more popular when firemen learn to go about their work more quietly and unobtrusively. As long as firemen insist on becoming so disturbed at the mere mention of a fire, and so coarse and blatant in proceeding to the scene of a fire, the really elite won't employ their services.

Dinner Stories

"I beg your pardon, but what is your name?" the hotel clerk asked. "Name?" echoed the indignant guest.

who had just signed the register. "Don't you see my signature there on the register?"

"I do," answered the clerk. "That is what aroused my curiosity."

Harry Singer, manager of a Chicago theatre, tells about an usher in a movie theatre of the "flicker class." The usher wanted a raise in salary and he broached the subject to his boss in humble terms. "I'm getting $3 a week already," said the boss. "What are you kicking about? You haven't much to do. Most of the time you're just standing in the rear of the house, waiting for the pictures." "Yes, sir, that's why I want a raise," murmured the usher.

A tramp was lying on a bit of road at a place where three roads met. A weary cyclist stopped and asked the way to his destination. The lazy one jerked the toe of his boot in the proper direction.

If you can do a lazier thing than that I'll give you a quarter," said the cyclist, dismounting. The tramp inclined his head toward his left-hand trouser pocket. "Put it in there," he murmured peacefully.

As the stage coach careened toward the edge of the cliff the timid tourist gazed anxiously down at the brawling stream 300 feet below. "Do please fall over this precipice often," she asked.

The driver, clucked to his horses. "No, madam," he returned placidly, "never but once."

POWER OF BOSS PENROSE IS HANGING IN BALANCE.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 22.—Pennsylvania's Legislature reassembled today with the power of the so-called Boss, United States Senator Boies Penrose, leader of the Republican organization since Matthew Stanley Quay died in 1904, in the balance. By electing Richard J. Baldwin speaker of the House three weeks ago Penrose men defeated the opposition led by Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh and the Vets.

The speakership was only incidental to the battle. The real struggle was for control of the state organization and control of next year's primaries, when candidates are to be nominated for governor, congress, the legislature. Armed with the veto power, Governor Brumbaugh may spoil enemy plans. Penrose must get a two-thirds vote to override a veto.

Penrose lieutenants have been talking "investigation" and "impeachment" of the governor. Declarations that he will be "Sulzerized" have been made more or less openly. Assemblyman Isador Stern, of Philadelphia, has repeatedly declared he will introduce impeachment proceedings.

CAN NOT RELY ON ANY INCREASED FOREIGN LABOR

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

New York, Jan. 22.—The presidents of six American railroads conferred in Chicago a few days ago regarding the Polish question, and were informed today they could not rely on an increased supply of Polish laborers after the European war, according to Dr. Kasimir Zurewski, professor at Loyola university, Chicago. The object of the convention is to assist in obtaining complete independence for Poland. The railroad heads were told without doubt, many Poles now employed in the United States will return to their native lands, if it receives autonomy as a kingdom. Measures to regulate such immigration into Poland after the war, will be considered.

JANESVILLE TAKES GAME FROM DELAVAN

Highs Win Sloppy Game by a Margin of But One Point—Many Substitutes for Janesville.

Janesville high basketball team succeeded in putting over Delavan by the close score of 12 to 11. It was certainly lucky for Janesville that Delavan had hard luck in shooting the throws, or Delavan would have walked off with another victory. Janesville went into the game with the intention of getting the men more than getting the score. Delavan played all around the local boys and did work, but were unable, even with the breath-catching shots, to put the ball through the net.

The game opened up with both teams fast on their feet, but rather reckless as to the way they handled the ball, and the kind of playing they did. Only a few minutes of the game had elapsed when fouls were beginning to be called on Janesville and Delavan also, until at the end of the first half Janesville had nine fouls and Delavan six. Janesville made four baskets out of six free throws, while Delavan only made three baskets out of six free throws. However, Delavan managed in ringing two field goals to Janesville's one, which ended the half with a score of seven to six in Delavan's favor.

The second half looked brighter for Janesville in making points, but rather gloomy for the men who played the game. Shortly after the opening of the half Kober had to be taken out because of a badly injured finger which had been bothering him all during the game. Morse was then put in to Kober's place, but because of his getting too rough with the Delavan boys, was asked by the referee to get out of the game. Morse was then followed by Crowley, who because of a sprained ankle, had to be removed from the game. Nuzum then substituted for Crowley and finished the game. It was lucky for Janesville that "Dick" got his basket in a foul shot and put in two in succession, from the center of the floor. These, with two more foul goals, defeated Delavan. Without a doubt, if Janesville had had the luck on the floor that won the victory over Waukesha, they would have run the score up much higher than what they did. Following is the score book's record of the game:

Janesville: Cushing, Kober, Morse, Crowley and Nuzum, forwards; Kenning, center; Davy and Spracklin, guards.

Delavan: Davis and Kuckels, guards; Johannessen, center; Swidler and Cummings, forwards.

Field goals:—Cushing, 2; Davy 1; Kuckels, 1; Johannessen, 2.

Foul goals:—Janesville, Cushing, 6; Delavan, Davis, 2; Cummings, 1.

MAY CHANGE MAKE-UP OF THE GRAND CIRCUIT

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 22.—Possible changes in the Grand Circuit's make-up constituted the chief point of interest here today when the stewards gathered for the 4th annual meeting. Florida, Ill. and Jacksonville, Fla., have presented applications for membership, and Readville, Pa., where the 2-minute record was broken by Star Pointer, is understood to be considering similar action.

This meeting will consider demand for Hartford a guarantee that it will give a full week of Grand Circuit events. It is charged the Connecticut tracks gave inadequate purses and less than three days of races of Grand Circuit caliber. Should Hartford drop out, Poughkeepsie probably would also go, for shipping distance would be too great for horsemen to make the venture.

The rules committee will consider reverting to the standard time-allocation system, forsaking the present method whereby fast horses are allowed in slower fields after having lost a number of races in faster time. The coming season has been imposed upon by the fact that the rather general protest.

The national betting system, adopted over the old bookmaking system in Detroit, Cleveland and Grand Rapids, is sure to come up again, though an effort last year to make it general failed.

Tracks represented are Columbus, Detroit, Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids, Poughkeepsie, Hartford, Syracuse, Lexington, Atlanta, and Cleveland.

MINNESOTA TO HAVE A CREW NEXT YEAR.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

Minneapolis, Jan. 22.—Rowing will be added to the list of sports at the University of Minnesota next spring, according to an announcement by Prof. Otto Zehner, chairman of the intramural sports committee of the university. A four mile stretch of quiet water, with only one slight turn, will be accessible upon completion of the new government high dam in the Mississippi river here. Interclass and inter-college rowing first will be introduced, and in a few years a varsity crew will be selected, according to plans.

The Portland club of the Pacific Coast league has sold the services of Shortstop Chuck Ward to the Pittsburgh Nationals, under a conditional arrangement that he is to be kept if he makes good in the eyes of Manager Callahan at the training camp. Ward is a light hitter, but said to be very fast in the field.

WISCONSIN BEATS ILLINOIS IN FAST SURPRISE BATTLE

Levis and Olson Star—Meanwell's New Formation Too Much for Illinois Stars.

Wisconsin's basketball team fought its way back into the running for the conference championship Saturday at Madison by defeating Illinois, 25 to 14. The Badgers were the more aggressive throughout and maintained such an alert blockade that the Illinois couldn't score a field goal until the closing minutes of the second half. Coach Meanwell presented a changed line-up. Instead of Hemming at center, he played McIntosh. The Edgerton boy is a trifle faster than Hemming and speed was an asset that meant much last night. Atwood, playing against McIntosh, had the advantage on the tip-off but the Illinois played from the jump were spoiled because of the three-men defense Meanwell had carefully prepared.

Numerous Fouls Called. Both teams were obviously playing under a severe strain and at times the handling of the ball was loose. For roughness the game had the average football game backed off the map. Referee Westover was a trifle too exacting at times and during the game called a total of twenty-three fouls, the majority of them personal. Slaps on the face were numerous and Ray Woods received so many that his left cheek was opened up. Body checking and severe spills were common. The superior weight and condition gave Wisconsin the edge in the hard playing and toward the close of the game Illinois was tiring rapidly.

Ten of Illinois' points were scored by the free throw route. It is remarkable that neither Atwood or Ralph Woods scored a field goal. In the four games played previous to last night these two men were the chief cause of upsetting the opposing teams.

Captain Levis alone scored enough points to have beaten Illinois; he dropped in five baskets and seven out of ten free throws. Little Ralph Woods, Illinois' star, again failed to get a basket. In fact, the only baskets scored by the Suckers were the two by the substitutes sent in for the last few minutes of play.

Olson played a smashing game at guard, his air-tight guarding preventing many an Illinois basket, and his furious dashes down the floor resulted often in a beautifully thrown basket. Paulie Meyers held the lightning-like Ralph Woods as few men have done before, giving him few chances to break away and stopping basket after basket.

The game was played before a crowd of 2,500 enthusiastic rooters. The line-up:

Wisconsin.	Position.	Illinois
Levis, Capt.	ft.	McKay, Haas
Meyers	g.	McIntosh
McIntosh	c.	Alwood
Olson	rg.	Ray Woods
Carlson	lg.	Halas
Field goals:	Levis, 1; Olson, 3; McIntosh, 1; Schneider, 1; Haas, 1.
Free throws:	Levis 7 of 10 chances; Woods, 9 of 12 chances; Haas 1 of chance.
Referee:	Westover, Purdue.
Umpire:	Reynolds, Chicago.

Harvey (Speck) Harkness will attempt a pitching comeback with the Portland Coasters next season. He will not sign a contract, but will make the training trip and his arm is right will become a regular member of the Beavers' staff. The Portland club expects to trade Herb Kelly, the Notre Dame southpaw, who says he doesn't want to play on the coast next season and that he can't report any year until after the close of the college year in June.

Johnny Rosner is going back to England to fight Jimmy Wilde, providing Jay can get an "excuse please" from the British army which he has just "made." Jimmy has been anxious to fight with powder and ball for some time, and now he is going to have his wish. The English promoters have been after Rosner for some time. The American bantam's style pleased the English critics, and had it not been for the unfortunate cut over an eye that practically blinded him, Rosner might have gone the limit.

Little Pete Herman of New Orleans has certainly stirred up that bantamweight quarrel again. By flooring Kid Williams a couple of times in a New Orleans ring the other night, and last, but not least, getting the decision at the end of twenty rounds, he jumps to the fore with the Johnny Erle in that mad scramble after the bantam championship. There is only one way to settle it. He and Erle must fight over the long route to a referee's decision.

Having sold Karl Crandall to Salt Lake City, the Indianapolis club now wants a second baseman. Report has it that Manager Hendricks, failing to secure Steve Yerkes from the Chicago Cubs, has made the Boston Braves an offer for Dick Egan. There's a lot of baseball left in Egan if he can be induced to accept a minor league berth.

Mike Doolan, former Philly and Brooklyn Federal league star, is to manage the Rochester International league club next season, and he landed the job through the efforts of John McGraw. McGraw delayed his winter trip to Cuba to help Mike land the Rochester berth. Incidentally McGraw pulled off the stunt of hitting two birds with one stone, for he paid off the last installment on Walter Holke, the Giants' young first sacker, as well as helping Doolan to a managerial berth.
